Ice Bucket Challenge Leaves Top Management All Wet

October 23, 2014

GCC became part of the "Ice Bucket Challenge" social media phenomenon by raising $1,000 to help find a cure for amyotrophic lateral sclerosis (ALS), better known as Lou Gehrig's Disease. Employees donated $400, and Mona Pappafava-Ray, president & CEO, matched employee contributions with a $600 donation to the ALS Association in the company's name. The two highest donors won the privilege of dumping water on their bosses. Mark Klingensmith, manager of technical sales, doused Mona and Dave Fleming, production supervisor, gave Trevor Dunthorne, COO, a mid-day shower.

The fight against ALS is personal for Trevor because his sister, Julie, has the disease.
